

Unity Parks

Reuniting Humanity with Nature and with all Cultures on Earth

Original Unity Park at Home for Humanity,
Haut Valromey, France

Unity Parks are a Planetary Participatory Initiative on the One Home Journey 2024-2030: 7 Years for 7 Generations initiated by the Home for Humanity Movement for Planetary Regeneration.

The aim is to create Unity Parks in every country on Earth to foster unity and peace: within us, between us and with all life on Earth.

In every Unity Park, local plants or trees are planted to represent every country on Earth, and to appreciate the unique values and gifts each of our diverse cultures contributes to our common future.

Purpose

UNITY

PEACE

HARMONY

Each Unity Park fosters unity, peace and harmony between the diversity of peoples, cultures and ecologies on our shared home planet, Earth. Each Unity Park is unique, grounded in its local culture and geography. Yet, all Unity Parks are connected across all borders in common purpose: to amplify our shared intention to live in unity and peace with the diverse and indivisible family of life on our one home, Earth.

Contribution to Unity, Peace and Harmony between People and Cultures, and with Nature:

Each Unity Park is initiated and cared for collectively by the local community. Each Unity Park is offered by its hosts as a gift to humanity and to the 'global commons'. Unity Parks expand gradually as the One Home Journey travels, season by season and year by year to diverse countries across each geographic region, between 2024 to 2030. Each tree or bush symbolises the unique values that every country, with its specific cultures and geographies, brings to our shared humanity and to life as a whole, and represents that culture's invaluable contribution to our shared future. Through the Unity Parks we establish a personal connection with all peoples as members of our shared human family. The Unity Park is a celebration of the indispensable value of biological and cultural diversity.

As a participatory initiative, it is a space to experience the interconnected wholeness of existence and to reconnect, as humanity, to the inherent unity within us, between us, and with all life.

Contribution to Integral Sustainable Development:

In each Unity Park, the diverse countries on Earth are represented (not by exotic or imported trees, but) by a variety of local, endemic and locally appropriate trees and plants, which offer a range of aesthetic, nutritional, medicinal, soil-regeneration and eco-system restoration benefits.

Unity Parks contribute to several SDGs, including: zero hunger (SDG 2), health and wellbeing (SDG 3), life on land (SDG 15), sustainable cities and communities (SDG 11); quality education (SDG 4); Peace and Justice (SDG 16). Furthermore, they complement and transcend individual SDGs with an integral, cultural approach.

Inclusive, Regenerative Future Building:

All Unity Parks are part of the Earth Campus of the One Home UnivEARTHsity for regenerative Future Building. Unity Parks are thus an interconnected, participatory planetary initiative to engage all people of all backgrounds, cultures and ages everywhere on Earth to rediscover our own humanity through the appreciation of the unique values of diverse cultures, and to experience harmony with nature, peace with all cultures, and unity with the family of life on Earth.

Original Unity Park

at Home for Humanity's Integral Home Campus in France

The first Unity Park was inaugurated in the community of Hotonnes in Haut Valromey, in the French Jura mountains, between Lyon and Geneva, Switzerland, on the lands of the original Home for Humanity.

At the heart of this Unity Park is also an extraordinary Gaia-Culture art installation, dedicated to Home for Humanity and to Earth healing, gifted by world renowned UNESCO Peace Artist Marko Pogacnik, Slovenia, and his Lifenet community of artists worldwide.
